

Rockin' Robin

Rockin' Robin loved to listen to rock and roll. He would fly around all day listening to the sounds that came out of houses. He really liked to dig for worms near houses that played rock and roll. One day, Rockin' Robin flew over a building when he heard some rockin' music. It was a radio station that played rock and roll. He liked the music so much that he built a nest in the tree outside the radio station. He could rock and rap to the music on the radio all day.

The only problem with his new home was that it was all paved. There was no dirt where Rockin' Robin could dig for worms. He thought he might have to move away.

The manager of the radio station noticed Rockin' Robin rocking and rapping to the music. "That robin could be our new mascot," he thought, but the manager realized that there weren't any worms for Rockin' Robin to eat.

The radio station paid for a bird feeder so Rockin' Robin wouldn't have to dig for worms. Rockin' Robin was very happy that he could stay in his nest by the radio station.
