

Nellie the Nannygoat

Nellie the Nannygoat was not nice. When other nannygoats came to play, she would butt them away from her toys. When the children came to bring her food and water, she'd nibble at their fingers. The children didn't like feeding Nellie because she liked to nibble on them. One day, the children refused to bring Nellie her food and water. Poor Nellie was hungry and thirsty.

"You should be nicer to the children," said the other nannygoats. "If you were nicer, the children would be happy to bring you food and water."

"I don't want to hurt them," said Nellie. "I just want to nuzzle up to them and give them a cuddle." "Keep your mouth closed, Nellie, so you don't nip them. They think you're trying to bite them."

Nellie tried it and it worked! She kept her mouth closed when she nuzzled the children, and after a while they realized that she was trying to be nice. Now the children brought Nellie treats with her food and water. They liked Nellie the nice nannygoat.

Nellie the Nannygoat

CD2: #3-31

A nannygoat named Nellie was never very nice.
She nibbled on my fingers - in fact she did it twice!
No, no Nellie! Never nibble me!
No, no Nellie! Eat the grass for free!

A nannygoat named Nellie was never very nice.
She nibbled on my elbow - in fact she did it twice!
No, no Nellie! Never nibble me!
No, no Nellie! Eat the grass for free!

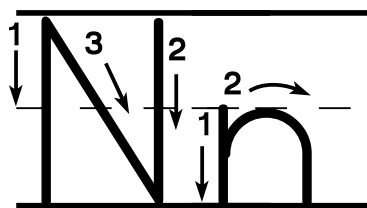

A nannygoat named Nellie was never very nice.
She nibbled on my shoulder - in fact she did it twice!
No, no Nellie! Never nibble me!
No, no Nellie! Eat the grass for free!
